

Selene 36-38 Trawler

2003–Current

Designed for secure coastal and offshore cruising, the Selene 36 (called the Selene 38 since 2010) is a well-built small trawler with a compelling blend of comfort and value. Among her other virtues, the 36 is notable in that she's one of the smallest full-displacement yachts available on today's market. A handsome yacht with a salty profile (note the reverse-raked front windows), the interior volume of the Selene 36 is impressive for a boat this size. The galley-up accommodations include two comfortably sized staterooms, two heads, and a spacious salon with port and starboard deck doors and L-shaped sofa. There are two large hanging lockers in the master stateroom, which is arranged with separate head and shower compartments as well as an engineroom access door. Visibility from the lower helm is excellent, and the entire interior is finished with solid teak joinery and a teak-and-holly sole. Topside, the Selene's full walkaround decks and sturdy handrails make her an easy boat to get around. A windlass, bow thruster, swim platform, and bow pulpit are standard. A single 220hp Cummins diesel delivers an efficient 7–8 knot cruising speed (about 10 knots top).
